From the Chair

In 2020-21 impacts of the COVID-19 pandemic continued to shape our lives. Everyone has been affected in some way but the lives of some groups in the community have been changed much more than others. Young people, people in casual employment, people in hospitality, tourism and the arts and those running small businesses have been amongst those whose livelihoods have been most profoundly impacted.

The Foundation continued to respond to the areas of demonstrable and growing need for financial counselling services that are not funded by governments. Many people who rent privately struggled to pay their rent once temporary protections against eviction and rent increases for those impacted by COVID-19 ended. Access to financial counselling for these people will be improved by grants to agencies that provide free legal advice to tenants, enabling in-house provision of financial counselling.

In total, more than $1.29 million was committed for grants in 2019-20, bringing the total amount the Foundation has paid and earmarked for grants since it was established in December 2017 to over $11.69 million. Detailed information about new grants is contained in this report.

Also in this report, we document how earlier grants from the Foundation have enabled financial counselling services to be introduced successfully in areas of significant and growing need that did not have other funding. For example, knowmore Legal Service, which provides legal and financial counselling advice to survivors of institutional child sexual abuse under the National Redress Scheme used a grant from the Foundation in late 2018 to establish a specialised financial counselling service for its highly vulnerable clients. The positive impact of that financial counselling service has now been recognised and significant funding from the Australian Government will ensure it continues.

In 2020-21, funding for grants came mostly from Community Benefit Payments made as a result of ASIC Enforceable Undertakings arising from corporate misconduct. In addition, a donation from ANZ Banking Group was used to fund a grant to support financial counsellor wellbeing. On behalf of the Board, I sincerely thank all those individuals and companies who donated to the Foundation. Thanks also to the Foundation's CEO and staff for their high quality advice and professionalism.

Community Benefit Payments have been the main source of funding for the Foundation since it was established to address the funding gaps due to years of chronic under-funding of the financial counselling sector. Although ASIC has indicated it will continue to use Enforceable Undertakings as well as litigation in the courts to address corporate misconduct, whether Community Benefit Payments will be a future source of funding for the Foundation's work is highly uncertain. While the sector struggles to secure sustainable funding and gaps are evident, there remains a case for use of Community Benefit Payments to fund those gaps for the benefit of people in challenging circumstances aiming for financial stability and independence.

From the CEO

In 2020-21 the Foundation worked with 46 organisations that had received grants. They have generally adapted well to the challenges and limitations presented by working through the COVID-19 pandemic. Some outreach to remote Indigenous communities by the 21 organisations with Foundation grants was delayed as bio-restrictions prevented access to those communities but will resume once it's permitted.

During 2020-21 the six Women's Legal Services and a community legal service funded to provide financial counselling services for the first time worked hard to establish the new service. Integration takes time and effort. The Central Australian Women's Legal Service performed the important role of running a Foundation-funded community of practice to support funded organisations to share experiences and knowledge about challenges and solutions. Having financial counselling in-house for women suffering the stress and trauma of domestic violence and financial abuse is an effective approach and we will see the benefits over the next few years.

Similarly, the Foundation committed over $1 million in grants to three organisations that provide tenancy support services: Tenants Victoria, Tenants Queensland and VERTO in NSW. After just six months of having that service available the evidence is that it complements the legal services, provides better, more convenient access to financial counselling and has helped some clients at risk of homelessness avoid that outcome.

In March 2021, Thriving Communities Partnership delivered a report on the first phase of the 'Fostering Financial Stability for People in Prison' Project. The aim of the project is to understand current approaches to supporting prisoners with financial issues, including what works and to provide recommendations about approaches that could enable people to leave prison in a more financially stable position. The phase one report, available on the Foundation's website, identified five short-term interventions to improve the financial stability of people in prisons. The Project is due to be completed in 2022.

These are some of the key highlights of 2020-21. I am proud of the progress made by the organisations the Foundation has worked with over the past year, particularly given the prevailing environment. A heartfelt thank you to the Foundation's Board and my colleagues at the Foundation for all their support and hard work.

About the Foundation

The Financial Counselling Foundation is a charitable trust established in December 2017 to increase access to free and independent financial counselling for people with money and debt problems. This was in response to chronic underfunding of financial counselling relative to demand. The Foundation achieves its purpose by making grants to fund:

- ◆ Financial counselling positions where a gap exists in government funding and there is a strong demonstrated need
- ◆ Professional development and support for financial counsellors to build capacity and help ensure ongoing access for those in need of financial counselling and
- ◆ Research into ways to improve access to financial counselling, for example, systemic barriers, innovative approaches.

The Need for Financial Counselling

2020-21 was an unusual year for financial counselling. A raft of temporary support measures for individuals and businesses impacted by COVID-19, played a critical role in supporting millions of Australians to stay afloat financially.

The support measures, especially the short-term lift in the amount of the JobSeeker payment and the introduction of JobKeeper, led to subdued overall demand for financial counselling. The increased amount of the JobSeeker payment (previously called Newstart) meant that many people unable to find employment were able to make ends meet financially – for some living on Newstart (renamed JobSeeker) this was the first time in years.

By the end of March 2021, JobKeeper had finished and the JobSeeker amount had been stepped down substantially. Following that, calls to the financial counsellors at the National Debt Helpline (NDH) rose in the June quarter of 2021 and on average have since tracked higher than a year ago. Throughout the entire period the NDH was a trusted source of information and visits to the website were more than 20 percent higher in 2020-21 than the previous year.

From mid-2021, COVID-19 outbreaks led to lockdowns in Australia's Eastern States that lasted several months in NSW and Victoria. Premiers closed State borders and Australia's international border already closed, remained closed. New, more targeted measures were introduced by Australian and State Governments to support individuals and businesses in States that experienced lockdowns. That support has been significant. Australian Government income support ('COVID-19 Disaster Payments') to individuals who have lost work due to COVID-19 is at the time of writing around $1 billion a week to individuals in NSW, Victoria and the ACT. There are also a range of State Government measures such as a moratorium on evictions in NSW, support for landlords who negotiate rental reductions for tenants affected by the pandemic and payments to affected small businesses. As with earlier, broader based measures, the support was designed to be temporary. Its end is to coincide with the lifting of lockdowns once target levels of Australians in a State or Territory are fully vaccinated against COVID-19. COVID-19 Disaster Payments will reduce in the first week after the target vaccination percentage has been reached and a week after that, it will be brought into line with the JobSeeker unemployment payment.

As Australia reopens Governments are relying on jobs returning and returning quickly. Earlier in the pandemic the unemployment rate rose sharply during lockdowns and then dropped sharply afterwards as economic and social life resumed. It's good that employment has recovered much more quickly than was widely expected a year ago. At the same time, it's clear that not everyone has been able to return to work. The low unemployment rates mask the fact that a large number of people assessed that their prospects of finding a job were so poor that they left the labour market and so have not been counted as unemployed.

Everyone has been affected in some way by the COVID-19 pandemic, but the lives and livelihoods of certain groups have been more profoundly affected than others. Among the hardest hit are people who were in casual employment, many of whom are young people, those in the hospitality, tourism and arts sectors, vulnerable people living in private rental properties, women at risk of and experiencing domestic violence and people running small businesses that have struggled to survive multiple lockdowns.

Those groups will continue to face challenges as temporary support measures end and Australia moves to 'living with COVID'. Financial counsellors have an important role to play in providing free and impartial advice to people trying to recover their livelihoods and regain financial stability following the largest health and economic shock unprecedented in modern Australia.

Zahra Foundation September 2020

A grant of $100,000 was made to the Zahra Foundation to provide financial counselling to women impacted by Domestic Family Violence (DFV) for the next two years. The grant will supplement other funding to ensure the Zahra Foundation can continue to provide a financial counselling service. Eighty percent of the Zahra Foundation's budget is received through fundraising, but fundraising was curtailed due to the impacts of the South Australian bushfires and COVID-19.

The grant to the Zahra Foundation follows the funding in 2019-20 of 10 full-time specialist DFV financial counsellor positions around Australia for three years. The total amount in grants made for this purpose is over $4 million. Funding for the 10 specialist DFV financial counsellor positions included donations from ANZ Banking Group and Great Southern Bank (formerly Credit Union Australia).

Financial Counsellor Wellbeing September 2020

A grant of $19,580 was made to Financial Counselling Australia (FCA) on behalf of the State and Territory financial counselling associations, to engage not-for-profit employee assistance provider, Access EAP to support the wellbeing of financial counsellors across Australia. Financial counsellors respond to clients experiencing trauma due to financial stress and are themselves subject to stress and at risk of vicarious trauma. In addition, many financial counsellors have had to work from home due to COVID-19, so are without the in-person social interaction and peer support that their usual workplaces would provide. The opportunities for financial counsellors to connect and receive support vary greatly depending on their circumstances. Access EAP provides an additional support for the wellbeing of financial counsellors during a time of increased stress.

Funding for the grant came from a donation from ANZ Banking Group.

Financial Counselling for Vulnerable Private Renters February 2021

Three grants of $390,000 each (totalling $1.17 million) were made to Tenants Victoria, Tenants Queensland and VERTO in New South Wales to fund in-house financial counselling services for three years. With temporary government income and rental support measures ending in December 2020 or March 2021 and sectors including tourism, hospitality and the arts severely affected and yet to recover from COVID-19 impacts, the Financial Counselling Foundation identified increased need for financial counselling services for vulnerable private renters.

Indigenous Cultural Awareness Training for Financial Counsellors June 2021

Twenty-two small grants totalling $5,562 have been made or earmarked to financial counselling agencies around Australia for Indigenous Cultural Awareness Training by local, suitably qualified providers. Training improves Financial Counsellors' capabilities to support Indigenous clients and so improves access for those clients.

Grant Impacts

Grants from the Foundation have enabled financial counselling services to be introduced in areas of significant and growing need that did not have other funding.

The stories and case studies below show how some community organisations have used their grants from the Foundation to establish financial counselling services and the positive outcomes those organisations have achieved for their clients and their clients' families.

One organisation, knowmore, has in 2021 secured $4.5m funding over three years from the Australian Government to continue the financial counselling service to its highly vulnerable clients. Another organisation, Bravery Trust, is funding its financial counselling service following a Foundation funded trial which demonstrated clear benefits for its clients from the Australian Defence Forces.

Bravery Trust

Financial counselling is now part of the service available through the Bravery Trust to serving and ex-serving members of the Australian Defence Force who have an injury or illness as a result of their service. This follows a trial of a financial counselling service funded by the Financial Counselling Foundation. An independent evaluation of that trial found those who received financial counselling:

- ◆ saw an immediate benefit from engaging with financial counselling and that benefit remained 3 to 6 months after the initial service
- ◆ felt less stressed and more in control of their finances after financial counselling
- ◆ felt better able to navigate their finances themselves and look for areas in their budgets where their money could work better for them.

The evaluation also found that assisting veterans ahead of the reduction in COVID-19 Government support payments enabled them to plan ahead and reduce some impending stressors.

Bravery Trust CEO Belinda Wilson said, “We’ve seen promising results, with 97% of those who received financial counselling able to sustain financial independence.”

Case Study – early withdrawal of superannuation avoided

Tom*, ex-navy, and his wife were in a precarious financial position which took a drastic turn for the worse when Tom’s wife lost her job due to the COVID-19 pandemic. When Tom and his wife contacted Bravery Trust, they had significant credit card debt, were at risk of eviction into homelessness and were both about to withdraw funds from their superannuation funds to survive.

The financial counsellor assisted them to understand their best options. They negotiated with the landlord to remain in their home, consolidated their credit card debts at a lower interest rate, achieved some utility bill waivers and developed a money plan to assist them achieve ongoing financial stability. Tom and his wife avoided having to make early withdrawal of their superannuation savings.

knowmore

Financial counselling is now an integral part of the service offered across Australia by knowmore to survivors of institutional child sexual abuse engaging with the National Redress Scheme (NRS). The Foundation's grant enabled knowmore to build the financial counselling service and compile a persuasive body of evidence about the benefits to clients and need for ongoing funding of trauma-informed, expert, culturally safe financial counselling services.

knowmore's CEO, Warren Strange, said, "We are delighted to confirm that these needs have been recognised with the Australian Government, through the Department of Social Services, providing knowmore with total funding of $4.5m over the next three years to provide financial counselling services to people participating in the NRS".

knowmore's Key Achievements

- ◆ Assisted 1,331 clients over two and a half years.
- ◆ Thirty nine percent of all financial counselling clients identified as Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander descent (compared with 31% of knowmore clients generally).
- ◆ 39 training and community education sessions provided to more than 3,950 attendees.
- ◆ Successful 'reach' of the service nationally, despite travel limitations due to the COVID-19 pandemic, from 2020.
- ◆ Critical successes in systemic advocacy and law reform, including contributions to Joint Select Committee two-year review of the NRS, and targeted advocacy on issues such as aged care and assets testing, and social housing.
- ◆ Secured additional and ongoing funding to support the expansion and continuation of the work of the financial counselling team, beyond the life of the Financial Counselling Foundation project.

Case Study – managing the implications of a payment from the NRS

A client who received a maximum payment from the NRS shortly after her divorce settlement had been finalised, deposited both the proceeds of her divorce settlement plus her NRS payment to her bank account with the result that her pension was to be decreased. This is not the intended effect of redress payments.

Although Centrelink had granted her a 12-month exemption from the assets test, she was struggling to purchase a house during a COVID-19 lockdown and was feeling stressed and concerned about how she would support herself and her two disabled sons if her fortnightly income was decreased. The knowmore financial counsellor assisted her to request an extra 12-month extension on the assets test exemption. This meant the client was able to continue receiving her pension and she used the extra time to secure a new home.

Women's Legal Services

Six Women's Legal Services around Australia have now established financial counselling as part of the service they offer in-house to the mostly women who experience domestic violence. Those services join Women's Legal Services Victoria which, thanks to funding from the Victorian Government, has successfully integrated financial counselling into its service for the benefit of its clients for some years. Women in situations of domestic violence frequently suffer financial abuse which prevents them from leaving their partner, or return to violent and abusive relationships as on their own they struggle to establish financial stability and independence.

Case Study – Women's Legal Service Western Australia – recovering from financial abuse

Fiona* experienced domestic violence including financial abuse from her ex-spouse. They had a joint savings account, self-managed superannuation fund and a home loan. Her ex-spouse took out all their savings and Fiona's entire superannuation without her knowledge or consent. Fiona has been paying as much as she can on the home loan, household bills and supporting two young children on her own while her income was reduced due to COVID-19. The home loan fell into arrears.

The financial counsellor assisted Fiona to set up hardship arrangements with her bank, complete hardship relief forms for the council rates, apply for utility grants and referred her to emergency relief services. While there's still a way to go to finalise arrangements between the parties, Fiona has started a new full-time job and hopes to refinance the mortgage in her sole name.

I am independent of the Foundation in accordance with the auditor independence requirements of the Australian Charities and Not-for-profits Commission Act 2012 and the ethical requirements of the Accounting Professional and Ethical Standards Board's APES 110 Code of Ethics for Professional Accountants (the Code) that are relevant to my audit of the financial report in Australia. I have also fulfilled our other ethical responsibilities in accordance with the Code.

I confirm that the independence declaration required by the Australian Charities and Not-for-profits Commission Act 2012, which has been given to the Trustees of the Foundation would be on the same terms if given to the Trustees as at the time of this auditor's report.

I believe that the audit evidence I have obtained is sufficient and appropriate to provide a basis for my opinion.

Responsibilities of the Trustees for the Financial Report

The Trustees are responsible for the preparation and fair presentation of the financial report in accordance with Australian Accounting Standards, and for such internal control as the Trustees determine is necessary to enable the preparation of the financial report that is free from material misstatement, whether due to fraud or error.

In preparing the financial report, the Trustees are responsible for assessing the Foundation's ability to continue as a going concern, disclosing, as applicable, matters related to going concern and using the going concern basis of accounting unless the Trustees either intend to liquidate the Foundation or to cease operations, or have no realistic alternative but to do so.

Those charged with governance are responsible for overseeing the Foundation's financial reporting process.

Auditor's Responsibilities for the Audit of the Financial Report

My objectives are to obtain reasonable assurance about whether the financial report as a whole is free from material misstatement, whether due to fraud or error, and to issue an auditor's report that includes our opinion. Reasonable assurance is a high level of assurance but is not a guarantee that an audit conducted in accordance with Australian Auditing Standards will always detect a material misstatement when it exists. Misstatements can arise from fraud or error and are considered material if, individually or in the aggregate, they could reasonably be expected to influence the economic decisions of users taken on the basis of the financial report.

As part of an audit in accordance with Australian Auditing Standards, I exercise professional judgement and maintain professional scepticism throughout the audit. I also:

- Identify and assess the risks of material misstatement of the financial report, whether due to fraud or error, design and perform audit procedures responsive to those risks, and obtain audit evidence that is sufficient and appropriate to provide a basis for my opinion. The risk of not detecting a material misstatement resulting from fraud is higher than for one resulting from error, as fraud may involve collusion, forgery, intentional omissions, misrepresentations, or the override of internal control.
- Obtain an understanding of internal control relevant to the audit in order to design audit procedures that are appropriate in the circumstances, but not for the purpose of expressing an opinion on the effectiveness of the registered entity's internal control.
- Evaluate the appropriateness of accounting policies used and the reasonableness of accounting estimates and related disclosures made by the responsible entities.
- Conclude on the appropriateness of the responsible entities use of the going concern basis of accounting and, based on the audit evidence obtained, whether a material uncertainty exists related to events or conditions that may cast significant doubt on the registered entity's ability to continue as a going concern. If I conclude that a material uncertainty exists, I am required to draw attention in my auditor's report to the related disclosures in the financial report or, if such disclosures are inadequate, to modify my opinion. My conclusions are based on the audit evidence obtained up to the date of my auditor's report. However, future events or conditions may cause the registered entity to cease to continue as a going concern.
- Evaluate the overall presentation, structure and content of the financial report, including the disclosures, and whether the financial report represents the underlying transactions and events in a manner that achieves fair presentation.

I communicate with those charged with governance regarding, among other matters, the planned scope and timing of the audit and significant audit findings, including any significant deficiencies in internal controls that I identify during my audit.
